

Abundant Rainfall Slows Fieldwork

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Plentiful rains across Tennessee last week helped boost soil moisture supplies, but hampered fieldwork. As a result, many row crop farmers are waiting for drier conditions to catch-up on their early season activities. Corn planting was underway on a limited basis. The State's corn producers are hoping to begin full-scale planting as soon as weather permits. Winter wheat was developing slightly behind the normal pace and the crop was rated in mostly good-to-excellent condition. Δ

Link Directly To: SYNGENTA