

Bulletin Offers Timely Crop Management Information

URBANA, ILL.

As a new crop year gets underway, farmers, industry representatives and others interested in agriculture can find the latest Extension news in The Bulletin, a crop development and pest management newsletter.

For the first time ever, The Bulletin will be available as an online publication only. Vince Davis, U of I Extension soybean specialist and editor, said they are no longer able to print and mail paper copies. However, many readers prefer viewing it online and printing out articles of interest.

The Bulletin is published weekly until August 12.

For more information and to subscribe, go to <http://ipm.illinois.edu/bulletin/>. Davis recommends that new readers sign up for e-mail notifications or utilize the RSS feed feature. △
